

Petros celebrates grand reopening in ribbon-cutting ceremony

CHICOPEE - Residents, community members and local and state officials gathered on Front Street on April 25 to celebrate the grand reopening of Petros Breakfast & Lunch.

A long-time staple of Chicopee, Petros serves a variety of entrées including pancakes, ham, French toast, eggs, hash browns, omelets, breakfast sandwiches and more.

Petros is open Mondays through Sundays from 6 a.m. to 2 p.m., with breakfast served all week and lunch served Mondays through Saturdays.

During the ribbon-cutting, Mayor John Vieau explained to the patrons inside they were thanking Justin Mahar and his mother, Robin, the new co-owners, "for their commitment to keeping this cherished establishment open and serving our community."

"Petros has long been more than just a restaurant. It's been a gathering place where friends and families come together to create cherished memories over delicious meals," Vieau said. "From humble beginnings to a status as a cornerstone of our community, Petros has held a special place in our hearts, in Chicopee residents for many generations and thank you for keeping that active."

Vieau said the decision to take on the responsibility of "preserving such a beloved establishment is no small feat."

"It requires dedication, a lot of hard work--a real lot of hard work--passion and a deep understanding of the importance of honoring tradition while embracing innovation," Vieau said. "The new owner, Justin, has shown all these qualities and more, ensuring that Petros will remain a beacon of hospitality and warmth in our beloved city."

Mahar was excited about the reopening and appreciative of the community support.

"It means a lot. It's so nice to see all the support from the city, to see everybody come down. They all come into the restaurant every week. The city's been great to me. I'm just excited to be a staple here for many years to come," Mahar said.

Mahar explained taking over also means a lot to him as he originally started as a dishwasher at the restaurant.

"This was, actually, my first job. I got hired from the original owner, I was 17, I used to just do the dishes. I worked here for him until he sold it for about seven years. I worked for the other owner, Jon, for about a year and I left and now I came back for the opportunity to own it and continue to bring a consistently good breakfast to the city," Mahar said.

Since taking over, the biggest lessons Mahar has learned are patience and being thorough.

"Just being really thoughtful of others and the situation that other people deal with. Always putting the customer first, always thinking about the experience of somebody coming into my restaurant," Mahar said. "It's not just with people or anything, it's with everything. Just how you have to plan and be about."

Mahar shared he's had people come in two or three times a day for meals and having so many patrons every day, also, means the world to him and his staff.

"I'm on a first-name basis with everyone. We've seen kids grow up here. We're seeing them now drive here to get their own food. They're all a big family. It's awesome," Mahar said.

Mahar encourages the community to give the restaurant another try if they have stopped coming by over the years.

"It's under new ownership, give it another try. I swear it's going to be a better, more consistent place for a good cup of coffee and a good plate of food," Mahar said.

For anyone who hasn't come to Petros yet, Mahar has this recommendation.

"If it was your first time here, I'd recommend the pancakes or ham. Just one pancake. Start off with one, you'll see why," Mahar said.
