Majesty and Mystery of Crop Circles Saturday, Oct. 19 at 10:30 a.m.

Join us for a power point presentation featuring designs that have been appearing with increasing sophistication during the past three decades in farmers' fields and other locations all over the world. Layered weaving of plants in the fields as well as anatomical changes observed in these plants are presented as evidence of powerful and mysterious energies at work. Effects on electronic equipment, soils, animals, and human visitors are also described. Interpretations of these intricate and exquisite formations, many of which occur near sacred sites and refer to mystical traditions, are discussed as well. This project is supported in part from a grant from the Granby Cultural Council, a local agency which is supported by the Massachusetts Cultural Council, a state agency.

She at one point went to peoples' homes to help them with organizing and decluttering, but soon discovered they had a difficult time decluttering and organizing for themselves, at a loss for where to begin, and feeling overwhelmed by the amount of clutter.

"That's how I came to doing the group meetings. I wanted to help people overcome their obstacles to decluttering. It's a psychological problem rather than a physical one," Martin said.

There are many reasons why someone may find it more difficult to declutter, and that can come from a variety of reasons, from guilt for donating something that was gifted to them, or the idea that they could use something in the future.

The group spends time discussing the fact that our society as a whole really values stuff, and every source of media around us broadcasts the need for more.

The newest car, gizmo, or gadget are hyped up by sellers and businesses and social media. After all, why not treat yourself to that new book, jacket, or kitchen utensil?

And sometimes, clutter can come in the form of gifts, or a trinket from a family or friend you don't have the heart to say no to.

This group deals with how to rationalize our clutter and separate the emotions that come with the items we have in our homes, and how to let go of guilt in the process of letting go of clutter.

"I always tell people to take baby steps and start small - one corner of the kitchen counter or their bedside table," Martin said. "Getting started is the hardest part. Once started, people often gain momentum."

Martin provides a three-step process: "Set a timer for 10 minutes. Take out one drawer to sort through. Remove donations right away to avoid those second thoughts and retrieving discards."

The group helps you pause, reflect, and move on from unwanted clutter, and in the process of removing it, helps to clear your mind, and help with focus and anxiety.

"I always say give the gift of experiences," one group member said. "The kids don't need another toy, and another one. Instead of a Walmart card, take them to Walmart."

"Since I retired, I have become impressed with what I just don't need," another member said.

"Think of ways you can make that item bless someone else, like it blessed you," a third said.

The group has a steady group of ten that come to the meetings, and some have been coming since the beginning, sharing stories, and celebrating the ability to move forward into a new, clutter-free life.

"My favorite part of the Belchertown Senior Center group is their enthusiasm and participation. We have no judgment of anyone's clutter, and everyone chimes in to solve a problem. I just love all the members," Martin said.

You can find the group meeting together, once a month, on the first Friday of the month, chatting together and learning about the freedoms of decluttering.
