stands for," Ledoux said. "I think it's important to remember that there are people who are diagnosed every single day. There are people getting chemo treatments every single day, there are people sick every single day and I hope that they have the support like the Pink W.A.Y. Foundation provides and with their family and friends while going through this."

Hector Reyes, lead singer of The Bermudez Triangle, shared the band had a great time performing at the event and encouraged the community to continue lending their support to breast cancer awareness along with supporting local businesses, especially women-owned.

"I would say come out to one of these events. It's very empowering. It's very empowering to see a bunch of vendors-like self-made entrepreneurs--who are out here," Reyes said. "It's just a lot of power to have in one area, so you bring that power and put it behind a cause, that's what I would come out for. The bonding, the unity, the community."

Kim Adoptante from Affordable Waste Solutions appreciated the community's support, adding the Pink W.A.Y. Foundation is also thankful.

"They definitely feel very blessed that we're doing this for them and we're so happy to do it," Adoptante said.

Adoptante was happy with the turnout.

"It's great. The world is a little bit scary right now. It's so wonderful to see people do things for a good cause, to be supportive, to be a community," Adoptante said. "Some of that feels so lost sometimes so it's really refreshing."
