Reflecting on the youth programs, Marinaro recalled a World Affairs Seminar 20 years ago that focused on the theme of pandemics, a youth exchange, Millennium Goals for the New Millennium, Rotaractors and more.

A goal this year is getting youths more involved in the Interact Clubs, citing

So, our goal is to bring that network together,” Marinaro said.

On belonging, Marinaro stressed welcoming everyone and focusing on the four-way test: asking if it’s the truth, if it’s fair, if it’s beneficial and will it build goodwill and better friendships.

“We do this because we want to make the world a better place and I believe that if we all take that to heart, we can make a difference,” Marinaro said.

Marinaro added, “If we connect Rotary to the whole world, we are an organization of great, great diversity.”

“So sometimes we look at our communities and we say, ‘Oh we’re not diversity we all look the same.’ But guess what, we’re part of a larger group. Connected by the Rotary Foundation so that we communicate,” Marinaro said. “If you’ve ever been to an International Conference, you realize the power of diversity because everyone that’s there is on equal plane, working together for the same purpose: service above self. So, I’m very proud of that and I think we sort of dwell too much about looking around, we’re not doing enough. Guess what, if you’re part of Rotary, you’re part of a very diverse group in the world.”

Marinaro ended his remarks thanking the club for their welcome, saying he was proud to be at the meeting.
